Player of the Week for his record-breaking performance in the Rams' 23-20 win over the Denver Broncos in Week 6. Empowered by the play of the Rams' offensive line John Sullivan Color Rush Jersey , Gurley went off on the Broncos finishing with 208 yards on 28 carries and two touchdowns. Gurley was the first Ram to top 200 yards on the ground since Marshall Faulk in 2001. It's the fourth time for Gurley to win NFC OPOW in his career after doing so three times in 2017. He also won NFC Player of the Month twice last year as well en route to being named the 2017 NFL Offensive Player of the Year. The game puts him on nearly the exact same statistical trajectory as 2017. Through six games, Gurley has 623 rushing yards and nine touchdowns on 129 rushes (compared to 621 yards and four touchdowns from 123 runs a year ago) with 21 receptions for 247 receiving yards and a pair of receiving touchdowns (23/245/3 last year). The Los Angeles Rams' offense appears to be unstoppable. The Seattle Seahawks threw some serious haymakers at the Rams' perfect record on Sunday, but each time Seattle made a big play, the Rams were able to counter. The Minnesota Vikings game, while never feeling as in doubt as the Seattle road win did, similarly resembled a Star Wars scene, with space crafts dumping laser beams on each other continuously until the final minute. But with interesting weather conditions, increased pocket pressure Todd Gurley Jersey Black Friday , and concussions to receivers Cooper Kupp and Brandin Cooks; the machine kept slogging through a feisty Seattle defense. As long as Jared Goff, Todd Gurley, and Sean McVay are in the building there seems to be a belief that the Rams will outlast whatever an opposing offense can muster. And Goff's offense usually remains clean and safe behind a line that has somehow improved entering their second season together. The defense remains a work in progress. On an individual level, most defensive players have performed adequately. Surely having Aqib Talib back would buy some time so that the pass rush could get home and contain quarterbacks more often, but technically backup corner Troy Hill played well in Talib's place. Obviously, the defense was hurt by several Marcus Peters' gambles in the Seahawks game, but it seems that the edge rushers, Samson Ebukam and Matt Longacre need to provide more containment on the pass rush moving forward. Ndamukong Suh and Aaron Donald are doing a good job of blasting the gut

<https://www.ramsfanstore.com/Nickell-Robey-Coleman-Jersey> , but if quarterbacks are able to drift out of the pocket to buy themselves time, the job is left incomplete. Against the run the Rams defense has been solid at times this season. The Seahawks game was not one of those times. Seattle's gruesome twosome of Chris Carson and Mike Davis had lanes all day against the Rams. It's hard to be sure what Wade Phillips answer will be, but perhaps he will dial back some of the pass rush on occasion, and emphasize gap integrity that could provide more of a chance to read plays and stay home; similar to the way the Falcons played against the Rams in last year's Wildcard game. And that is the last bit of advice this blogger will lend to a genius like Wade Phillips today. Let's see what adjustments take place this week. Sean McVay has cultivated a championship culture. Whether it's the offense having barbecues together in their spare time, or going for it in 4th down situations where few other coaches would, McVay has put ownership of his team's destiny in his player's hands. Following Sunday's win McVay reasoned , "They wanted to go for it, so you want to put the trust in them Joseph Noteboom Color Rush Jersey , and they delivered." What he really just did, was he allowed Jared Goff to take a major step toward becoming a respected team leader. It's easy to forget that most of the players are in their mid-20s, and how easy it is to be a fool at that age. But McVay is a true teacher who takes the time to explain why and how things work to allow for a big-picture understanding. No matter what big personalities the Rams have brought in, this team seems about as professional as it gets.
