Penile prosthesis, a malleable or inflatable device is a treatment option for men with erectile dysfunction. A simple prosthesis contains a pair of expansive and malleable rods that are implanted surgically within the erection chambers of the penis that makes the penis semi-rigid so that it merely requires lift or adjustment to attain erection to initiate sex. Nowadays, many men choose an inflatable, hydraulic prosthesis, that allows to achieve erection whenever it is chosen and is quite natural easier to conceal. A penile implant is usually applied when during a clear medical need for ED and when the problem cannot be resolved naturally or with any other medical therapy. Sometimes penile prosthesis implanted at the time of surgery for reconstruction of the penis in patient's with Peyronie's disease.
